Abstract: The successful college food service director has enthusiasm, empathy, dedication, ethics, quality consciousness, an outgoing personality, leadership ability, food service knowledge, business knowledge, close association with other food service professionals, and awareness of and dedication to good nutrition. A new food service director chronologically prioritizes steps to take to reorganize his operation. The manual presents reorganization steps chronologically to include: 1) developing a master plan; 2) setting up a food purchasing system; 3) establishing budgets and control; 4) building a staff; 5) maintaining food quality; and 6) dealing with residence halls, cash operations, vending, sanitation, safety, catering, special events, and public relations. Appendixes and exhibits provide illustrative, helpful suggestions. A food service director's job can be creative, imaginative, challenging, interesting, and rewarding for the director who is on top of things. First Published in 2011. Routledge is an imprint of Taylor & Francis, an informa company. Includes Part 1, Number 2: Books and Pamphlets, Including Serials and Contributions to Periodicals (July - December) Defective trees are potential hazards to people and property in recreation areas. Most reported tree failures within recreation sites in the Rocky Mountain Region occur in lodgepole pine. Defective root systems account for the greatest percentage of failures. External indicators of defects are used to identify trees that may fail. Some tree species, particularly aspen, are highly susceptible to visitor damage; managers should restrict recreational development in such forest types. Old growth spruce-fir stands should also be avoided for developed sites. Systematic, annual, documented inspections of trees in recreation sites and corrective action are recommended to reduce hazards to the public. Cases decided in the United States district courts, United States Court of International Trade, and rulings of the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation. Forest Recreation focuses on the increasing consideration of forests as destination for recreation. The book aims to put together the findings of researchers on the issues and problems that confront forest recreation administrators and the demands of the public. The selection also offers guidance to forest land managers with respect to the basic requirements of forest recreation as well as in planning. The book starts by defining outdoor recreation, including history and the factors affecting this type of recreation. The text then gives information on the number of forest recreation areas and the distribution of these areas, as well as the underlying legislation covering outdoor recreation. Forest recreation planning is noted, which includes a discussion of a state-wide comprehensive outdoor recreation plan. The book also discusses site selection and the development of recreation areas. Classification of areas in forests is also described, which includes picnic grounds, camping sites, and trails. Sanitation in forest recreation areas is also discussed. The text can best serve the interest of forest land managers, forest technicians, foresters, park technicians, and private landowners who are responsible in planning, developing, and administering forest recreation places.
